

Evie Canary, 6, smiles as she takes a tumble on the ice during Girls Try Hockey.

Photo by Hannah Ruhoff | The Post

HUMAN INTEREST

Not for just the boys: Girls Try Hockey, a program for young female hockey players

By Hannah Ruhoff, Matt Parker, Colin Mayr and Elliott Magenheim

September 7, 2018 | 1:50am EDT

Hockey is one of the most male-dominated sports in the country. The Athens Youth Hockey Association organizes Girls Try Hockey to try and break that domination. Here are some images from Girls Try Hockey at Bird Arena on Wednesday:

THE POST

Hannah Ruhoff

Val Young, the chief scheduler for the Athens Youth Hockey Association, helps Caroline Trembly, 4, with her socks and shinguards during Girls Try Hockey.

Colin Mayr

Caroline Trembly receives help from her dad, Jason, while getting up for the Girls Try Hockey event at Bird Arena.

THE POST

Elliott Magenheim

Lani Richard, 4, looks around her during her first time at Bird Arena on Wednesday.

Hannah Ruhoff

Evie Canary, 6, takes a break after falling on the ice during Girls Try Hockey.

THE POST

Hannah Ruhoff

Jessica Hagger helps her daughter, Maddison, 6, tie her skates to prepare for Girls Try Hockey.

Colin Mayr

✓ Jon Rose, of Gloucester, takes a video of his daughter, Evie, while she participates in the Girls Try Hockey event at Bird Arena.

THE POST

Colin Mayr

Maddison Hagger takes a break during the Girls Try Hockey event at Bird Arena.

Colin Mayr

✓ Sedona Palmer, 7, assists Katlin Brown, 5, with tying her skate during the Girls Try Hockey event at Bird Arena.